

Abstract

A contacting component for manufacturing an electrically conductive connection includes a conductor device (2) onto which at least one first plastic component (3) and separately a second plastic component (4, 5, 6) are molded in which case the conductor device (2) can be bent in such a way that the first plastic component (3) can engage in the second plastic component (4, 5, 6) to provide an integral contacting component.